HEROES OF AMERICAN HISTORY

A YANKEE WHO SANG OF THE SOUTH!
STEPHEN FOSTER

Foster was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., and, except for one or two pleasure trips on steamboats, never saw the South. When he was seven years old his mother once took him on a shopping tour. In one store he saw a flute, and, after struggling with it for a minute or two, astonished the clerks by playing "Hail Columbia" on it.

Foster was an undisciplined young man, but very absent-minded. He frequently walked down the street, his eyes on the ground, seeing no one and hearing nothing but the music inside of him. He formed a singing club among his friends, which met at his home. For this club he wrote "Old Folks at Home," "Oh, Susannah," "Old Black Joe," and many other Southern songs. They became popular overnight and are sung to this day!
